From the Airport to the City

Travel to and from the Mexico City airport is easily accessible via the Metro or Metrobus Linea 4. When arriving at the airport, it is recommended to prepay for authorized taxi services within the terminal for a safe and reliable option. Beware of illegal taxis operating outside the airport and opt for legitimate services. Due to ongoing maintenance and reconstruction at the airport, there may be potential delays. We kindly ask for your patience and understanding upon arrival.

By Car

Mexico City is well-connected to various neighboring cities and countries through an extensive road network. If you're driving from the United States, you can cross the border at various entry points, and once in Mexico, highways will lead you to the capital. Ensure you have the necessary documentation, including a valid passport and Mexican auto insurance. Be prepared for scenic drives through picturesque landscapes as you make your way to this vibrant metropolis.

By Train

While Mexico City primarily relies on road and air transportation, there are limited train services available, mainly for domestic travel within Mexico. The Estrella de Oro is a popular train service that connects Mexico City to destinations like Acapulco and Cuernavaca. Check schedules and availability in advance if you're considering this option for your journey to Mexico City.
